Synopsis

Lion: A Long Way Home is the extraordinary and heartwarming true story of Saroo Brierley, who was adopted from India as a child and returned home 25 years later using Google Earth. Born in India, Saroo was just five years old when he became separated from his family after falling asleep on a train. He ended up in Calcutta, thousands of miles from home, and could not speak the language or remember his family's name. After months of living on the streets, Saroo was eventually placed in an orphanage and adopted by an Australian couple.

As Saroo grew older, he began to have vivid memories of his life in India. He remembered his family's home, his mother's face, and even the name of his village. Determined to find his way home, Saroo spent years searching for his family using Google Earth. Finally, in 2012, after 25 years of searching, Saroo was reunited with his mother and siblings.
