Walsh believed that the essence of the game lies in creating a system where every player is empowered to execute their role flawlessly. This system, he argued, would ultimately lead to victory without the need for an obsessive focus on the scoreboard.

Walsh's philosophy encompassed four key tenets:

1. Preparation: Rigorous preparation and meticulous attention to detail, leaving no stone unturned in the pursuit of excellence.

2. Execution: Emphasizing the importance of every individual performing their assigned task with precision, regardless of their position.
3. Fundamentals: Mastering the basics and relentlessly honing foundational skills, creating a solid foundation for success.
4. Teamwork: Fostering a collaborative environment where players work together seamlessly, valuing unity over individual accolades.
